In 1852 he removed to Williamsburg (Brooklyn), where he became paster of the New England Congregational Church, but after two years he went to Elmira to take charge of the Independent Congregational Church, afterward the Park Church, and it was there that the chief part of his life work was accomplished. Under his direction the church was exceedingly prosper-ous and influential, there being nearly one thousand pupils in the Sunday school. The church building cost $130,000, and never church building cost $130,000, and never was dedicated, as Mr. Beecher refused to have the ceremony performed while the building was still in debt, and seemed to regard it as unimportant after all the debt had been paid off. It was his idea to make the church as much like a family as possi-ble, and to promote the greatest amount of social intercourse and fellowship among
